Memo and The Notebooks Release Dreamy New Single "Sleepwalk"

Santa Cruz/San Jose, CA • September 8, 2025

Memo and The Notebooks release "Sleepwalk", a new single that reimagines the 1959 instrumental classic by Santo and Johnny. By adding lyrics to the familiar melody, the band explores the ache of missing someone you love, the pull of distance, and the only way they can appear is in your dreams.

The lyrics reinforce this sense of longing and intimacy. Lines like, "Sleepwalk, with my eyes closed, I dream a lot about you girl" capture the quiet yearning of late night thoughts everyone can relate to. Moments such as "I can't hold back anymore, my heart is sure that you're for me girl... I need you right here with me all of the time" reveal the raw urgency behind that longing and how powerful it can truly be.

The song's dreamy guitar textures and emotive vocals amplify this personal, almost cinematic narrative, turning a classic melody into something true to the heart and alive. With the band's signature mix of energy, nostalgia, and unpredictability, "Sleepwalk" is unmistakably Memo and The Notebooks. It is a song that is both personal yet inviting and at the same time introspective and bold.

"Sleepwalk" will be available on all streaming platforms.

"The original 'Sleepwalk' has always been beautiful in its simplicity... I wanted to honor that feeling but also tell my story about being apart from the person you love and how they only return to you when you close your eyes."
